Tourism

Main Attractions

El Estero

At the East end of the Playa Hotelera (Hotel Zone) in San Jose del Cabo, you'll find San Jose's famed estuary, home to over three hundred and fifty species of wildlife and lush vegetation. Fed by underground aquifers, the river and lagoon are one of the few oases in the lower Baja peninsula

Land's End Arch

The only true land's end in the world, Land's End arch is a geological rock formation where the Pacific Ocean and Sea of Cortez meet. The arch is a marvel made even more attractive by the colonies of seals and sea lions basking in the sun on the rocks and the huge number of pelicans and other birds that fly over the area. Reachable only by boat, "El Arco" is the most recognizable landmark in Los Cabos

Los Cabos

Whale Watching

If you're fortunate enough to visit Los Cabos in the months of January through March, it's likely that at some point during your stay, you'll have the pleasure of seeing the Gray whales. Their migration takes place each year and starts from the cold areas of Alaska and Siberia and goes to a warmer climate, ending in the waters of the Sea of Cortez. Simply watching these incredible creatures frolicking amongst themselves is an awe-inspiring treat. Spouting, the action of exhaling air, is what you will probably see first. As the whale approaches, however, you may see breaching as well. Breaching is when the whale leaps almost completely out of the water and falls back with a large splash. This is a spectacular sight

Scuba Diving

The renowned Jacques Cousteau and many other adventurers have called the Sea of Cortez the world's richest sea and this is especially true of the southern tip of Baja. Three major ocean currents collide here to create the unique and varied life that abounds in these fruitful waters. Dives at these sites can go from deep to very shallow. You'll see unique and amazing rock formations, gigantic boulders, underwater canyons, colorful schools of tropical fish, turtles and rays
